

3 NOVEMBER 2010, 8 PM
REITZ UNION BALLROOM

A woman wearing a red helmet, a red t-shirt, and blue jeans is rappelling down a dark rock face. She is holding a yellow rope and has a purple harness. The background shows a forest with green foliage. In the bottom left corner, another person is visible rappelling down the rock face.

tapestry & thinking & tapestry actions

WEAVING THREADS OF SCIENCE, ARTS, AND THE HUMANITIES TO CREATE THE GOOD LIFE

Dr. Nalini Nadkarni, professor at Evergreen State, has been a TED lecturer and a former Guggenheim fellow. She is the author of three books, including Between Earth and Sky: Our Intimate Connections to Trees (University of California Press, 2008), and numerous articles.

Sponsors: Office of Academic Affairs, Office of Sustainability, ACCENT, Center for the Humanities and the Public Sphere, Department of Religion, Center for the Study of Hindu Traditions (CHiTra), Innovation through Institutional Integration (I-Cubed) Program

UF UNIVERSITY of FLORIDA

sustainable UF